We engaged with young people in both the park and Greenfield Gardens, where we promoted the upcoming summer activities. We had positive and friendly conversations about their summer holidays and how they had been spending their time. Although there were only a few younger children present, they were happy to speak with us.

We then moved on to the beach and the village as a whole, which was relatively quiet despite the improved weather and the incoming tide. However, we were able to speak with several members of the community. Discussions included the planned summer activities and general topics concerning village life. Community members expressed enthusiasm and support for initiatives aimed at improving opportunities for young people.
